Assignment Zero – LaTeX Limericks

Ryan Munger

Ryan.Munger1@Marist.edu

August 30, 2024

1   Limericks

From a time of spirited morale
Emerged a language named Pascal.
    Despite the compiler's constant griping,
    Value was found in strictly typing,
Braving the years with firm rationale.

On the search for man's greatest pal
A contender rose, named Pascal.
    For simple syntax always has your back,
    A vintage shell without a crack,
To carry you down life's canal.

Programmers who love C plus plus
Find high-level python treasonous.
    Despite the complexity of a pointer,
    Low level code becomes an anointer,
Blessing fruits of knowledge if you aren't superfluous.

There once was a professor named Labouseur
Scared students run away in fear.
    With a website superior to Brightspace,
    Pupils may focus on an algorithm's embrace,
Rendering algorithmic analysis crystal clear.